from Lamer agree in saying that a sangumary conflict between whites and blacks is likely to occur at any moment. The trouble originated from a quarrel between a white man and a negro. The latter was in a quarrelsome mood and used impudent and insulting language to the white man and was promptly knocked down. Several other negroes, who witnessed the quarrel, espoused the cause of their colored brother, and in a short while the white man was being kicked and cuffed in a lively manner and would have no doubt been killed but for the timely arrival of a few whites. On the appearance of the whites the negroes fled from town. In a patch of woods on the outskirts they called a halt and at once join them. Mark Twain's Wooing.

Mark Twain, if he is in the mood will tell the story of his own courtship in a manner worthy of the greatest of living humorists. When he first met the lady who afterwards became his wife he was not so distinguished as now; his origin was humble, and for some years of his life he had been a pilot on the Mississippi river. The future Mrs. Clemens was a woman of position and fortune; her father was a judge and doubtless expected "family" and held a consultation. It was decided social importance in his son-in-law. to send messengers to all the negroes Clemens, however, became interestin the vicinity, calling upon them to ed in his daughter, and after a while
